

It's good to see those pit bulls rehabilitated

- Story

- Discussion

Font Size:

Default font size

Larger font size

| Thursday, March 15, 2007 | No comments posted.

I thank God for Curtis Scott, who was featured in last Saturday's paper. He is recognized for his admirable work of rehabilitating the 15 pit bulls from a dogfighting ring in Calumet Township. Three have been adopted, and two more have homes waiting for them. He is also training center workers to help socialize the rescue dogs.

I am amazed that fighting dogs lives can be turned around for the better. Usually they are euthanized without being given a second chance. Scott is giving these dogs a second chance, which makes me very happy that this is possible. Pit bulls are discriminated against. Actually, they are a loyal breed that desires to please their owner.

Hopefully, pit bulls used by evil, sadistic humans for fighting will be allowed a second chance.

Carol Tuskan, Highland